NEW SHUBERT THEATRE.

The coming of the Shuberts to the old The coming of the Shuberts to the old Lyric theatre is a significant theatrical event. It means the presentation in this city of many attractions which formerly nave had no house open to them. With the leasing of this playhouse as a tempofor a larger theatre it looks as if the innovation is destined to be permanent. Since the opening of the Colonial theatre year ago tonight the theatrical uation has greatly changed in Salt Lake.
There are now four playhouses presenting legitimate drama and two high class vaudeville houses which, together with the moving picture shows, present all that is good on the western circuit today.

The new Shubert theatre has been improved and reseated to accommodate much larger houses than formerly. New draperies and carpets, redecorating and tinting have much altered the appearance of the theatre, the lighting is good, ance of the theatre, the lighting is good, and while little could be done to enlarge the stage it will serve very well for the present. The house was packed at the performance last night and the few discomforts did not detract in any measure from the delight the audience took in the play.

There is an all-star cast and a selected New York company that presents the delightful play as musical comedy; should be given. Feature for feature, there is superior work throughout and except for the defects in staging, which are unavoidable, there is little that did not win hearty response and appreciation from the audience.

"The Gay Musician" is charmingly vivacious. There is not a dull moment. It goes with vim and spirit, and there is superior work throughout and except for the defects in staging, which are unavoidable, there is little that did not win hearty response and appreciation of this whirlwind musical comedy hit at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York.

Mr. Cohan is making a coast-to-coast tour and the magnitude of his organization service on all the recent trial, Getis waylaid Kothiaftis at the recent trial, Getis waylaid Kothiaftis as the latter was returning to his board-ing place. A battle followed. Kothiaftis was hit three times before he could draw his gun. With his gun hand disabled he managed to 'riddle his opponent's heart with three well-directed shots.

He fled, but was captured, and the murder charges followed. Self defense was assisted Mr. Cohan in the presentation of this whirlwind musical comedy hit at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York. Mr. Cohan is making a coast-to-coast tour and the magnitude of his organiza-

The best of these were "My Dashing Soldier Boy," by Maude and chorus; "A Cup of Tea," by Maude, Hilda and chorus, and "I Have My Doubts," by Maude and Eugene. But in a cast of the present excellence it is hard to determine the favorites. Miss Lottie Kendall, who played the part of Marie Dubois, wife of the Gay Musician. has a charming voice and manner, and she was especially well liked. Her principal songs are "The Saucy Sparrow" and "Not So Simple As I Look." Margaret Crawford, the principal contralto, highly entertaining to the Orpheum regumade a hit as the mother-in-law and invested that time-worn role with some at every performance, sometimes really new features. She did not sing unexpected and surprising results.

charming and graceful as is this one of Miss Klingel's.

The best voice is the beautiful baritone of Harry Benham. He played the title role of the gay musician and it gave him excellent opportunity to display his unusual talents. The great song of this play is "Lovelight," which deserves to rank with the best known comic opera favorites. It is attractively featured. First rehearsed by the musician directing the chorus, then sung by Eugene in a most brilliant manner, and again heard in chorus and finale, it is easily the most important feature of the performance. Another favorite in the men's parts was in "Cameo Kirby," which appeared at as a section hand on the Salt Lake arranging for the production of "The Man From Home," at the new Shubert theatre, Nov. 24-27. Ordinarily in a big organization of this kind, it is an unusual thing to find at the first performance more than five or within the six of the girls who were chosen on the first day's tryout of applicants, but so carefully were these girls selected and from such an enormous number of can-didates, that only one change has been made since the first day's rehearsals, and this was due to the fact that the girl was taken ill with appendicitis.

BUNGALOW THEATRE.

Judging from the class of shows which the Bungalow theatre is offering its patrons at such low prices, the houses should be capacity from now on. For this week, starting tonight, the headliner is Luigi Picaro and troupe, the peers of all hand balancers. Magicians as a rule are good for a brief period. Carnaris does not become tiresome, most of his work being comedy. The Still City quar-tet have a comedy singing act introducing a ball game which is funny. "The Gay Musician" is charmingly vivacious. There is not a dull moment. It goes with vim and spirit, and there is much of the happy light comedy that is the best of all qualities in this sort of play. The plot is a minor matter. It merely serves to give a meaning to the beautiful music, the well drilled choruses and the clever lines. Twenty-one numbers, all but two of them musical, make up a most enjoyable program. Nearly every one was encored, which lengthened the performance materially, but even the finale came too soon.
